Project Title: KitKats in Japan Microsite

1. Project overview

I want my website to be informational, but composed in a fun and light way for people to enjoy learning about KitKats.

2. Resources

Copy is available at https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kit_Kats_in_Japan with some photography. I plan on using some photographs on google photos as well.

4. Audience

I don't picture this website being promoted commercially, but rather for people who have some free-time on their hands to learn about an interesting topic. The only specified audience outside of that would be the instructors for this course.

5. Message

I'd like to focus on the numerous strange varieties of KitKats that exist, as well as the marketing strategy behind the numerous flavors.

6. Tone

As stated before, I want the website to be fun to go through, and have a light feeling without feeling too cluttered. Not too many harsh contrasts, but light, airy typography that remains legible with the content speaking for itself.

7. Visual Style

My two ideas for visual style are:

1. Composing the website like a chocolate box or in a convenience store (where these KitKats are most often seen) -> maybe with an illustration or an image of a convenience store with certain objects highlighted/functioning as buttons within the image

(but as a convenience store)

2. Focusing on the symmetry of the kitkat, and thinking about using long rectangles that divide the page (horizontally or vertically)
